Important Intelligence,

[From London papers received at the office of the Phil. gazette, per the Pigou captain Collet.]

PARIS, July 16.

Citizen Chauvet, Adminiſtrator General of Foreſts, arrived at Hanover, on the 11th inſt. in order to ſelect in the foreſts of that country, for the purpoſe of being ſent into France, ſuch oak and other trees as are fit for ſhip building. The college of the Deputation of the country at Hanover has conſented to furniſh 2000 horſes for remounting the French cavalry.

[From the Moniteur.]

The meaſures which the Engliſh Government has taken in blockading the mouths of the Elbe and the Weſer, is a new infraction of the right of the neutrals and the ſovereignty of all the powers.

France, attacked by England, acquired the right of carrying the war into all the Britiſh poſſeſſions, and of occupying as ſhe had done in prior wars, Hanover, which forms a part of them. But ſhe has not occupied the banks of the Elbe, except in the countries of which this conqueſt has put her in poſſeſſion. She has reſpected the neutrality of Bremen, Hamburgh, & the other States of the continent.

What circumſtances could therefore, have authorized the King of England to exclude neutral Powers from the navigation of the Elbe and the Weſer? If the Engliſh flag cannot ſhew itſelf at all points within the reach of a French battery, at leaſt it ought not prevent neutrals from navigating to every place whether the fortune of war has conducted the French armies, and from maintaining their communications with each other. The Elbe and the Weſer waſh a greeat extent of neutral territory. The rivers which fall into them, ſtill farther increaſe the commercial relations to which they furniſh a channel of conſumpt. To ſhut the entrance of theſe rivers is to intercept the communications of a great part of the continent. It is to commit an act of hoſtility againſt all the countries to which that navigation belongs.

England ſhould declare in a more open manner that ſhe will not permit any power to be neutral. But on the other hand will the neutrals permit their flag and their rights to be diſregarded?

If England has reſolved to punish Germany for not having protected and defended Hanover, it is doubtleſs as a Principality of that Empire that ſhe ſupposed herſelf entitled to that protecting. Yet how could ſhe dare to claim the guarantee of the members of the Empire, at the moment when ſhe violates the rights of one of thoſe members? The King of England, in his quality of member of the Germanic Body, had conſented to the arrangements, had ſtipulated indemnities, in favor of the Order of Malta, equally conſidered as a Principality of the Empire. Scarcely had his Britannic Majeſty ſolemnly ſigned theſe diſpoſitions, when he attacked the independence of the territory of the Order. She has not a right to make for herſelf claims which might more juſtly be advanced againſt her.

Beſides, the meaſure of ſhutting the entrance of the principal rivers of Germany is like all thoſe which England has for ſeveral months paſt adopted, an act of infatuation which recoils upon herſelf. She diſſolves her commercial connexions with Germany, and ſhuts up the principal channels for the introduction of her merchandize upon the Continent. She accuſtoms its different nations to diſpenſe with the produce of her induſtry. She compels them, in order to obtain articles of an equivalent kind, to apply to France, to which, after the mouth of the Elbe is ſhut up, all the channels of land conveyance remain open.

The Engliſh Journaliſts announce as an heroic deed on which they may pride themſelves, the capture of ſome French fiſhing boats; yet in this inſtance alſo, England acts againſt herſelf. By diveſting the unfortunate inhabitants of the coaſt of their property, and depriving their families of their means of ſubſiſtence, ſhe reduces that population, whoſe reſources ſhe has deſtroyed, to a ſtate of deſpair; ſhe excites them to exert themſelves with greater ardour to defend our territory and to avenge their country. She lights up a feeling of hatred in the hearts of thoſe men who, from the obſcurity and tranquility of their life, ſeem the leaſt acceſſible to that ſentiment.

Thus a bad action is always followed with fatal results; what is unjuſt can never be profitable, and can only tend to inflame the public opinion.

It is in the nature of man to refuſe his aſſiſtance, and his good wiſhes, to undertakings obviouſly contrary to equity and good faith; and whatever may be his prejudices, he always ends with being drawn towards the juſter cauſe. What would be the fate of Europe, if there were no power diſpoſed to reſtrain the ambition of a ſtate which makes no account of treaties or conſiderations of juſtice!

The Engliſh Miniſtry, however, follows the bent to which their character, well known to all Europe, inclines them. Feeble men cannot obey the voice of reaſon; abandoned to their paſſions, they are inceſſantly extravagant. A moderate conduct atteſts the vigor of ſound judgment; injuſtice and violence proceed from actual weakneſs; as a paroxyſm is the natural effect of diſeaſe. How can the light of reaſon ſhine amidſt the illuſions of delirium? Are not the people of England daily told that France is a prey to every kind of diſorder, and ſtill torn by factions; that the government is without force, and the public ſpirit without energy? Perhaps, in ſpeaking againſt evidence, the Miniſters of his Britannic Majeſty no more ſpeak againſt their conſcience, than a ſick man in a ſtate of delirium, when he points out to the by ſtanders the phantoms which his imagination has created.

Woe to the people conducted by men weak and without ſyſtem! Woe alſo to Europe, ſhould what ſtill remains of the power and proſperity of a great people continue at the diſpoſal of ſuch men!

HANOVER, July 4.

The Adminiſtrator General of Foreſts, Citizen Chauvet, arrived here on the 23d ult. with ſeveral French foreſters. The object of his miſſion, it is ſaid, is to ſelect from our foreſts the oaks and other trees fit for the uſe of the French navy, and to cauſe them to be conveyed to France. Citizen Dierbach, ci-devant adminiſtrator general of the conquered countries on the left bank of the Rhine, and now Commiſſioner of government to the Executive Council, aſſisted on the 28th of June at the firſt ſitting of the College of Government: he has given orders that there ſhall be formed an exact liſt of all the buildings belonging to the Electoral domains, which will be afterwards publicly ſold.

Gen. of Brigade Berthier, and the Commiſſioner Michaux, have lately received ſeveral magnificent ſaddle horſes from the Royal ſtables. Lieutenant Gen. Mortier made a preſent of fifty louis d'or to the Hanoverian groom who brought the horſes deſtined for him.

LONDON, July 18.

The following letter contains ſuch an inſtance of that genuine and efficient public ſpirit much wanted at this moment, has been received by the Lord Provoſt of Glaſgow, and which we think highly worthy of being literally ſtated:

"Glaſgow, July 11, 1803.

"My Lord,

"In caſe of an invaſion of this country by our enemies, I hereby make offer, for the uſe of government, of forty horſes and carts to any part of Scotland, as alſo of ſix waggons and 40 horſes in Lancaſhire, to any part of England his Majeſty may think moſt uſeful; the drivers expences to be paid by your Lordſhip's moſt obedient humble ſervant,

JOHN SCOTT,

"Manchester and Glasgow Carrier."

Colonel Dirom, in his "Plan for the defence of Great Britain and Ireland," remarks, that "in Cornwall it is reckoned there are 80,000 miners, near Newcaſtle 60,000 colliers, and in the counties adjoining to Edinburgh at least 10,000 colliers, miners, and able labourers, ſo that before a hoſtile army could be landed upon theſe coaſts with all its equipments, ſuch a body of pioneers might be collected at any of the above places, as might encompaſs the foe with a rampart which it would be impoſſible to paſs.

July 22.

HOUSE OF COMMONS,
Thurſday, July 21.

Mr. VANSITTART moved, that the Houſe ſhould go into a Committee tomorrow, to conſider ſo much of the Cuſtom Conſolidation Act as related to the Regulation of the Duties on Quaſſia, imported into the Kingdom; the exportation of tobacco, and alſo the propriety of allowing the importation of Cotton from New Orleans, and the weſtern ſtates of America. Ordered.

NEWBURYPORT, August 27.

Britiſh Adjudications.

What potent ſpell can theſe words contain, that they are no ſooner pronounced, in this town, than the head of every democrat droops like the branch of a ſenſitive plant? Strange, that a ſubject which for years has afforded them a fruitful topic for the moſt violent and profane abuſe, ſhould, all at once, become ſo powerful a ſedative! The laſt adminiſtration were all tories, traitors, Engliſhmen, becauſe they would not go to war with a faithleſs, overbearing, tyrannical, cruel, oppreſſive, monarchical, robbing, thieving, plundering nation! Our language was exhauſted for epithets of invective; the air was tainted with curſes. The Engliſh ſtated, that in carrying on a war with a powerful enemy, it was impoſſible for them not to involve in ſome degree, the commerce of neutral nations. They uniformly profeſſed the moſt pacific diſpoſitions, and promiſed to reſtore the property which had fallen into their hands in proſecuting the war againſt their enemies, as ſoon as a board of commiſſioners ſhould be able to examine documents forwarded to ſubſtantiate claims. But the headlong ſpirit of jacobiniſm would hear nothing of this, and the federal adminiſtration, for liſtening to ſuch promiſes, was denounced as treacherous, partial and corrupted.

The board of commiſſioners was organiſed—the proceſs of examination was tedious and complex. We were, however, frequently receiving intelligence of awards in favor of our citizens.

This was not enough—All were not paid. There was Mr. Such a one, and Mr. Such a one, in this town. Two days ago a dumb ſpirit ſeized them all, for which we can account, only by the information contained in the following note from Mr. Thomas Williams, of Boſton, brother to the agent in London:

"Sums awarded in England.

Veſ. Names. Maſter,		Sterl. Belonging to
Beaver,	Pierce,	£892 14	John Greenleaf,

Peggy & Polly,	Brown,	1,059 1	Nich. Greenleaf, & Co. L. N. Spizenfield, Moſes Brown, and Philip O'Brien.

"From amount of awards, coſts and commiſſions are to be deducted."

A conſiderable proportion of the above ſums is for damages.

Should it now be enquired what have the Engliſh done, but juſtice; We anſwer nothing. No more than the friends of the treaty expected. But our confidence in the national integrity of Great Britain was the ſubject of inceſſant ſcurrility. Compare the reſult of claims on the Engliſh, with the fate of ſpoliations on the high ſeas, committed by our beloved ſiſter republic. Compare the diplomatic ſkill exhibited in the treaty with the Engliſh government, with the humiliating ſtipulation, ratified by Bonaparte and Mr. Jefferſon, by which American claims, for millions, were buried in endleſs oblivion. Such is the difference between a federal and a democratic adminiſtration.

NEWBEDFORD, Aug. 26.

"Arrived at Home's Hole, Aug. 15.

Schr. Betsey, of Boſton, 27 days from Cape Francois. In the Gulph Stream ſpoke ſhip Swan, Howard, of Baltimore, 5 days out all well. Same day ſaw a ſhip under French colours ſtanding to the ſouthard, and in about half an hour ſaw a ſhip under Engliſh colours, upon whom the Frenchman bore down, when a warm action commenced which continued about half an hour when the Engliſh ſtruck to the French ſhip, and was taken poſſeſſion of and both ſtood to S. E. The French ſhip ſeemed to be very much ſhattered as well as we could obſerve, the diſtance being about 2 leagues.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8.

New countries, we have often obſerved, are ſoon overſtocked with—thieves. The Kentucky Gazette of the 23d ult. ſays, "We cannot recollect the number of houſes that have been broke open in this place (Lexington) within a few weeks. Scarcely two nights have paſſed during that time, without ſome burglary being committed," and concludes with enumerating ſeveral, and calling upon the inhabitants to be vigilant. The acquiſition of Louiſiana and the Floridas, may be of ſome ſervice to Kentucky—for there will then be a vaſt field for the ſpeculators of all deſcriptions.

Captain Clarke, of the ſchooner Lyon, who arrived at New York in 10 days from St. Croix, informs, that four days previous to his ſailing, a Danish Guineaman arrived there in 24 days from Copenhagen, with intelligence that the First Conſul had evacuated the territory of Hanover in conſequence of a ſpirited remonſtrance from the Northern Powers, in which they declare their reſolution to coaleſce for the preſervation of their neutrality during the continuance of the preſent war between France and Great Britain.

Capt. Liddle, of the Waſhington, from Amſterdam, arrived at New York, informs that when he left that place, (July 13) the French troops were hourly expected.—They had arrived at Haerlem, Leyden, and Utrecht, and had taken poſſeſſion of the principal poſts throughout Holland. Capt. L. had not heard of the French having croſſed the Elbe.

THE THEATRE.

On the laſt evening of performance, a Comedy called "The Marriage Promiſe, and the muſical after piece of "The Shipwreck" were repreſented.

The Comedy contained many good points. The ſcene where Mrs. Howard diſcovers herſelf to Conſols was natural and affecting, and it was extremely well performed by Mrs. Green and Mr. M'Kenzie. Mrs. Weſt, jun. was an excellent repreſentative of Emma—indeed, ſo the characters in general, and we ſhould thus paſs on to the Shipwreck, did we not pauſe to mention Mr. Rutherford. Let him not, however, ſurmiſe that we are awed by his pen, or that of his champion Juvenis. On his laſt performance we could hear him nearly through his whole part—he likewiſe aſſumed animation, and in the duel ſcene he was more firm and ſpirited. Hence we find that he has profited by our obſervations. This was the only end we ſought, and we could have wiſhed them now at a concluſion, but we fear that Juvenis whom we may notice when we have both leiſure and room, will again, ſtill more unwillingly, bring his name forward on the old ſcore. Nothing can be more irkſome than the interference of a too officious friend.

The muſical entertainment of the Ship-wreck is one of the beſt modern productions of humor and plot. The part of Stave could not have been better hit off by a veteran actor. Mr. Hopkins is one of the beſt comic performers we have ſeven. Storey was in character, he ſings an excellent ſailor's ſong, and performed better than we have hitherto witneſſed—nor could we deſire a character better acted and dreſſed than that of Shark.

This little piece brought ſo ward three female characters, and all of them good. Mrs. Hopkins performed the part of the little ſailor, and ſung her ſong charmingly. Mrs. Green and Miſs Melford alſo deſerve our warmeſt praiſe.

A Hint to Pseudo Critics.

When a perſon aſſumes the priviledge of a Critic, when he takes the attitude of a ſelf created cenſor, and preſumes to exerciſe, in ſome meaſure, a kind of dictatorial power, it would be well for him to be perfectly aſſured that he is not altogether unqualified for ſuch an office. He may take it for granted, that his own performance is a much fairer mark for the ſhafts of real criticiſm, than that of the votaries of Theſpis, who uſe their well meant endeavours (in general, ſucceſſfully too) for the entertainment, and ſometimes the improvement, of the audience. When a perſon is compelled to an involuntary exhibition of his literary talents, in the newſpapers, the good nature of an American public induces them to view him with a mild and complaiſant eye. But when he voluntarily intrudes upon the community, the effuſions of his genius, and eſpecially when they meet us in the magiſterial form of criticiſm, we have an unqueſtionable right to apply its ſtricteſt rules in aſcertaining their merit. A writer ought to be very certain that in giving publicity to the fond offſpring of his own brain, he is not ſo far miſlead by parental partiality, as to exclude more valuable matter. He ought to be very ſure of its poſſeſſing ſomething well worth the attention of his fellow citizens. It is no juſtification to ſay, we are not compelled to read—we may exerciſe our own diſcretionary judgment, becauſe how do we know the merit of any work before we have read it? Alas the nauſeous ſtuff is ſwallowed before we are aware of its conſtituent qualities, and the diſgorging is as diſagreeable as the reception. I have been lead into this train of reflection, by ſeeing the public peſtered for ſome time by a ſucceſſion of ſomethings in the Alexandria Advertiſer, which the writer has thought proper to dignify with the appellation of Critiques. Who the author is, or from what rhetoric he has taken his rules of compoſition, heaven knows. To me they are perfectly new; and ſure I am, he has taken them neither from Quinctilian, Longinus, Cicero or Ariſtotle among the ancient Rhetoricians, nor from Blair or Johnſon among the modern writers on Belles Lettres. Perhaps he has been amuſing himſelf with Martinus Scriblerus, and thus has acquired the very eſſence of the Bathos or art of ſinking. I am very ſure that either as a writer or dramatic performer, I would rather be the object of his cenſure than of his applauſe. Eulogy from ſuch a pen would be the ſeverest of all obliquy. The only and beſt ſecurity the author of the Critiques has for eſcaping with impunity, is, that they are totally beneath the dignity of criticiſm. They contain nothing, either with reſpect to ſtyle or matter, for the genuine critic to operate upon. The rules of criticiſm may, with propriety, be applied to diſcover the defects, or develope the beauties of a Shaftesbury, a Bolingbroke, an Addiſon, or a Johnſon: but to apply them to the writer of the criticiſms, would be like breaking a butterfly upon the wheel. His analogy between the "Sixty Third Letter" and the letters of the Alphabet, is a convincing proof of the correctneſs of the preceding obſervation, and is what I ſhould not have expected, even from a boy at his Corderii Colloquia, or an old woman of the laſt century.

If the author is a claſſical ſcholar, I recommend to his attentive peruſal, the Belles Lettres, writings of Quinctilian, & Longinus, of Blair and of Doctor Johnſon, and if he has not an immoderate ſhare of obtuſeneſs, he may very eaſily diſcover, that his ſtyle is completely deficient in propriety, perſpicuity, ſtrength, neatneſs, ornament or any other beauty which a good writer ought to poſſeſs; that, on the contrary, it is oſtentatious, harſh, feeble, obſcure, and moſt wretchedly conſtructed. He will alſo find, that criticiſm is not merely the art of finding fault; that it is a liberal and humane art, the offſpring of good ſenſe and refined taſte. It aims at acquiring a juſt diſcernment of the real merit of authors, if directed towards literary works; and of Actors, if directed towards dramatic exhibitions. To be enabled to view, with a juſt and diſcriminating eye, the merit of dramatic performances, requires an extenſive and accurate acquaintance with dramatic writers, a thorough knowledge of human nature, of the paſſions of the mind under all their various modifications; in fine, it requires all thoſe qualifications which conſtitute the ſcientific and enlightened Belles Lettres ſcholar. Who is he, who thus inſolently ſets up his own corrupt taſte and crude conceptions, as a ſtandard to regulate the taſte of others? Does he poſſeſs a ſingle quality which gives him a legitimate claim to the exerciſe of ſuch a power? Is there a ſingle perſon who frequents the Alexandria Theatre, of a tolerably enlightened mind, whoſe pretenſions are not, at leaſt, equal to his own? I hope we ſhall have no more of this arogant and preſumptious monopoly of taſte and ſcience, and that the elegant author of the critiques will give the Alexandrians credit for a little taſte and a little knowledge, and leave them in peace and quiet to the exerciſe of their own powers of judgment.

Symptoms of Gluttony.

Not long ago, a ſporting blade in England, made a conſiderable bet with another of his own deſcription, that he would produce a man who could eat more at a meal than the other.—It was a bet, done and done. At the time and place appointed to decide this beaſtial wager, the firſt, could not attend, but appointed his friend to judge of the proweſs of the two gluttons—the event will appear in the following letter.

DEAR JACK,

ANECDOTE.

A Gentleman driving a number of cattle to Boſton, one of his cows went into a barn yard, where there ſtood a young lad. The drovier calls to the boy "ſtop that cow my lad! ſtop that cow!"—"I am no conſtable, Sir" replied the boy.—"Turn her then"—"She is right ſide out now Sir." "Well ſpeak to her then." The boy took off his hat, and very handſomely addreſſed the cow with "You ſervant Madam!" The gentleman roder into the yard, gave the boy a piſtareen, and drove the cow out himſelf.

THAT VALUABLE & EXTENSIVE

called Mount Salus, alias Millthrope, lying in Fairfax county, on Difficult and Wolf Trapruns, containing by Deed 550 acres & by survey 673 acres. The Mansion House is on a high healthy and agreeable situation, convenient to which are springs of good water—The house is 40 by 18 feet, two rooms on a floor, with a nine feet passage and stair case, two brick chimnies, with a fire place to each room, a piazza the whole length of the front, a cellar 40 by 18 walled with stone and divided into two apartments. There are several small buildings near the Mansion House and garden. There are also a valuable Merchant and Grist Mill, Saw Mill, Distillery, Miller's House and Overseer's House.—The Mill House is 40 by 30, two stories high, half of the lower story of stone, the other part framed work, and covered with shingles. There are one pair of Burr, and one pair of Cologne stones, three bolting cloths almost new, and one screen, all now in use in manufacturing wheat and grinding grist. The still house 40 by 30, one story high, walls of stone and shingled roof, the floors planked, the upper laid for malting grain, and troughs fixed round the whole house constructed to carry water to every vessel which may need it. Three stills and one boiler can be worked to advantage in said house. The waters on Wolf Trap, on which the mill and saw mill stand, are constant streams. The situation for country custom, or purchasing wheat is exceeded by none in the county or neighborhood, not being more than 17 miles from Alexandria, and 13 from George Town, where there are excellent markets for country produce of every description; and about 14 miles from the city of Washington. The land is fertile and productive, and the soil well adapted to receive improvement, from the use of plaister of Paris. There are upwards of 3000 pannels of fence on the land, and about 160 or 170 acres of well timbered land belonging to the tract. There have been nearly 20 acres of timothy made, lying on Wolf Trap and Difficult runs; 50 acres more may be made at a small expence. This farm enjoys many natural advantage which are unnecessary for us to mention, it being taken for granted that any person withing to buy such property will avail themselves of the opportunity of viewing the premises, previous to the day of sale.

The terms of which are, one third of the money to be paid on the day of sale, (at which time deeds will be made the purchaser) one third in six months, and the other third in twelve months, with the interest accruing on the two last payments from the day of sale. A deed of trust will be expected to secure the last payments.

Some informality in the decree prevented the sale agreeably to the former notice. This defect being obviated by the parties, the property will most certainly be sold as now notified.

Captain James Wiley, residing near the land, will shew the premises, and also a plat of the survey, which is left with him for the information of those concerned.

The title papers will be exhibited on the day of sale.
